

Handout about using reference presented by Fred Keebler

We can use the law to guide us in deciding what is not OK.

- Do you plan to sell your work?
- Is it creative?
- Are you using the unique portions?
- Are you taking away from the original creator?

Where to get copyright free references:

When ever using any of these sites, check that you can use an image as you intend.

→ Google Image Search - To find Creative Commons license images:

1. <Tools> menu option (at the top)
2. <Usage Rights> submenu
3. “Creative Commons licenses”

→ <https://pixabay.com/>. Pixabay is a free stock image site after you sign up for an account.

→ https://commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/Main\_Page Wikimedia Commons material uses various CC licenses.

→ <https://www.freepik.com/>

→ <https://www.vecteezy.com/>

→ <https://www.pexels.com/>

→ <https://unsplash.com/license>

→ <https://magdeleine.co/license/cc0/> - multiple licenses filter for CC0 images.

→ <https://www.oldbookillustrations.com/> - public domain created before 1923.

→ <https://isorepublic.com/>

→ <https://jaymantri.com/>

→ <http://realisticshots.com/terms>

→ <https://jeshoots.com/>

→ The Biodiversity Heritage Libra