

Although she sometimes paints a series in the same concept, Masini usually explores diverse images, styles and emotions. She uses whatever medium gives her the results she envisions -- whether oil, watercolor, acrylic, dry media or mixed.

Kay Masini

Masini says the world is not just one picture -- one style can't describe it.

She holds a degree in Art and philosophy from Dominican University in Illinois; she also attended the Chicago Art Institute and took a summer study at Oxford University in England. She continues to take workshops from our own U.S. Master Artists whom she considers her favorite teachers. Masini believes there is always more to learn

By expanding her aesthetic vocabulary in tools, materials and concepts, she adds to her expression and visual communication.

She has exhibited in Europe, has had a one person show there and has her work in corporate and private collections. Masini also has an art-slide presentation called "From the Brain to the Brush".
